Okay, so, guys. Parasites often cause their hosts to behave in a manner that causes the host to act in a fashion beneficial to the parasite, but detrimental to the host, right?

Pattern-based analysis suggests that It gets in through what Dad calls a crack. Some initial trauma, large or small. The host has to have been hurt, like you catch a cold when your immune system is already stressed from other things.

So what's the first thing a gamma starts doing after they convert?

All right, unconscious mind. We're coming to an accommodation. If the dreams are you cleaning

Elvis doesn't live here anymore.

Hey there. Sorry about the drama. It was... it was an emotional decision, and I didn't Poppets.

Puppets. Poppet

puppets. Scary.

COLLAPSE

...traumatizing things.

...I'm totally making this up to freak myself out, aren't I?

...totally.

Oh, doorbell. Different kind of hell today. 0.0

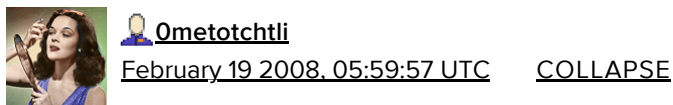

But wait, there's more.

It implies that maybe there's a reason that baselines are jerks to each other, too.

Which rapidly makes things big enough that I am happy to retreat into denial.

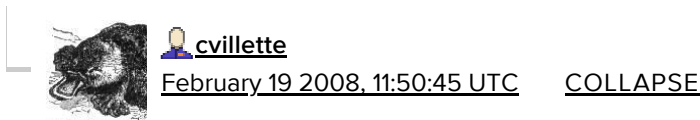

Still. I wonder how one would test that hypothesis. And maybe I will just casually mention it to Dad.

This is a work-related post. Posted on a Federal holiday. So I felt entitled to ignore it.

Unfortunately, now it's tomorrow.

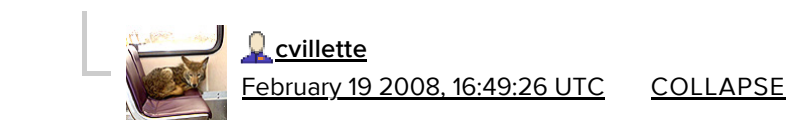

And your story is creepy and someone declare today a Federal holiday pls.

First, elect me president.

Sweetie, no one at my Old Job is tall enough to cover your head when detailed to you.

I slouch!
